

The map illustrates the proposed telephone network for the Jhansi Division. It shows a complex web of cable routes connecting various village panchayats and telephone exchanges. The legend indicates that solid red lines represent existing cables, while dotted red lines represent proposed cables. Blue squares denote village panchayats, and red stars denote telephone exchanges. The network is centered around the Jhansi area, with routes extending to various surrounding locations. Key exchanges include Jhansi, Bhatnagar, and others. The map also shows the locations of various village panchayats, such as Akaru, Kamalpur, and others. The legend further defines the symbols used: a red star for a 1:8 splitter, a red star with a cross for a 1:4 splitter, a green star for a 1:2 splitter, a green cylinder for an OLT, a blue square for a village panchayat, a solid red line for existing cable, a dotted red line for proposed cable, and a red star for a telephone exchange.
